Mourabilty, sing moorabilty,
And die away, my heart!
The rose, the glorious rose, is gone,
And I too will depart.

The skies have lost their aplendor, The waters changed their tone, And wherefore, in the fided world, Should music linger on? Where is the golden annehine, And where the flower-cap's glow? And where the jets of the danning leaves, And the fountain's laughing flow?

A voice in every whisper Of the wave, the hough, the air, Comes asking for the heautiful, And mourning—"Where, oh! where?"

Tell of the brightness parted,
Thou like, then Lamb at play?
Thou lack is thy victorious much!
Are ye, too, pass'd away?

Morrifully, sing mournfully!

The royal blose is gone:
Melt from the wood, my spirit melt,
In one deep farewell tone!

Not so! - swell forth triumphantly The fu'l, rich, fervent studio! lence with young Love and Life I go, In the Summer's joyous train.

With surshine, with sweet odour, With every precious thing. Upon the last warm southern breeze, My soul its flight shall wing. Alone I shall not linger
When the days of hope are past,
To watch the fall of leaf by leaf,
To wait the rushing blast.

Triumphantly, triumphantly, Sing to the wrods, I go ! Forms perchance in other lands. The glorious rose may blow.

The sky's transparent source,
And the greensward's violet breath,
And the dance of light leaves in the wind,
May these know sought of Death.

No more, so more, sing mountally ! Swell high, then break, my locat! With Love, the Spirit of the Woods, With summer I depart!

From a London Paper.

APPRENEEMSION OF THE WEST MOULSEY GANG OF BURGLARS.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—The public will be glad to bear that the daring gang of barglars which committed the memorable robbery in the house of the Rev. Mr. Warrington, at West Moulney, in November last, and been the terror of the villages in the vicinity of the metropolis, where they have, during the last eighteen months, carried on a system of plunder with an impunity that defied the skill and ejertions of the most intelligent and experienced officers of police to that defied the skill and exertions of the most intelligent and experienced officers of police to detect, is at length likely to meet with that re-tributive justice which the crimes of the gang so well merit.

The history of the gang and their plan for disposing of their ill-getten property would, if given in detail, occupy too much space in the columns of a public journal, but a brief account of some of their exploits, and the manner in which they have been denounced to the police.

which they have been denounced to the police, we shall briefly narrate. The gang, which consisted of fivo desperate fellows, at the bead of which was a man named fellows, at the head of which was a man named Banks, who had been tried at the Old Bailey for robbery, and, was for some time an inmate of Newgate, committed the burglary at the house of she Rev. Mr. Warrington, at Wust Moulesy, on the night of the 20th of November last. The particulars of their dragging Mr. Warrington and his wife and servant from their beds, tying them with seads looking them in the cells; and his wife and servant from their bods, tying them with cords, locking them in the cellar, and stealing his horse, chaise, &c., must be still in the recallection of our readers. The almost unparalleled daring of the outrage excited at the time a very strong public feeling against the villains, but notwithstanding the large reward which was advertised for the apprehension of the thirses, and the offer made by his Alignets. the thieves, and the offer made by his Majesty of a free pardon to any one of them who would impeach his coadjutors, and be the means of bringing them to justice, no clew was obtained that was likely to lead to the detection till with n the last few weeks. The gang committed a urglary in the dwelling-house of J. Campion, eq. at Waltham-cross, on the night of the 20th May last. They cut out the pannel of a back door, and by introducing a hand withdrew the door, and by introducing a hand withdraw the fastenings. Amongst other property, they carried off a green top coat, the property of Mr. Campion; five men were seen early on the morning going away from the back part of Mr. Campion's house with bundles.

When the gang had obtained a "awag" (booty) of what in their slang language is termed "pewter" (silver plate,) they used to depose of it to a well-known "fence," named Joe Barnett, who immediately consigned it to the melting pot. Barnett was what is called a dealer, and traded at the coffee-room in Duke's-place, where the lower class of Jew dealers congregate to purchase and exchange commodities. He was apprehended a little more than three months ago by Herdsfield, the city officer, charged with stelling a quantity of silver plate. The robbery had taken place a few days before, and Herdsfield seeing a porter, followed by the prisoner, stopped the porter, who was carrying the stolen property; Barnett ran a say, and effected his escape. The porter proved that he had been employed by Barnett to carry the property, and he was ignorant that it had been stolen. On the following day Herdsfield met the prisoner near Finsbury-square, and saw him run into a baker's shop; he pursued, and took him into custody. These facts being proved on his trial, he was convicted and sentenced to transportation for life, he being an old offunder. The Moulsey gang were the parties who actually stole the plate in question, of which Barnett was the receiver only. After he was taken, he said that one of the robbers had "nosed" apon him to the "traps," because he had refused to give the sum the gang had demanded for the "awag;" and he knew that Herdsfield have known that his had any thing to do with the porter who carried the "swag;" wenty yards behind him? Since Barnett's conviction his suspicions that he was betavad by one of the rob and Second streets, where the above articles, of very best quality, are sensitably kept for Exportation or times Consumption.

reward and a free pardon had been offered to any one (except the individual who used the violence is Mrs. Warrington) who gave information that led to the apprehension and conviction of the gang, and he advised Barnett to avail himself of the apportunity of obtaining a commutetian of his senience. Barnett authorized his selicities to make known to the Chief Magistrate of Bow-street his willingness to assist in bringing the gang is justice upon certain conditions. His solicator had an interview with Mr.
And Mrs. Warrington, and also with the Secrebringing the gang to justice upon certain conditions. His solistics had an interview with Mr.
and Mrs. Warrington, and also with the Secretary of State for the Home Department, and it being clearly shews that there was evidence that was likely to convict the gang, if they should be taken, it was determined to employ Bishop, one of the principal officers of Bowsirset, to effect the apprehension of the parties.
Bishop, who is well acquained with all the hymns of the initiated exactmen, soon accertained fliph the gang had split, and that they were on country shedreiens. He engaged the assatance of Ledger and Craig, two active officers, end they soon got accent of some of the gang. Is the early part of last week the officers proceeded to a house in Chequer-aley, Goldes-lane, and there they apprehended a man manual Banks, who was one of the principal robbers of the Medinay gang. They have subsequantly apprehended two men, named Taylor and Smith, and on Saturday last, a fourth of the gang was apprehended, by the officers of police at Lambeth-street.

and Smith, and on Saturday last, a fourth of the gang was apprehended, by the officers of police at Lambeth-street.

Banks, when taken and brought by Bishop to Bow-street office, underwent an examination before fir Richard Birnte, which, as the rest of the gang were not at that time in custody, was taken in private, and the arbiquee was not permitted to transpire. Mr. and Mrs. Warrington, and a number of witnesses, were in attendance. Both Mr. and Mrs. Warrington identified Banks as one of the gang of robbers who entered their bed-room, and phundored their brouse on the night of the 20th of November last. Mrs. Warrington declared that he (Banks) was the parson, who, when violence was offered to her by one of the robbers, interfered in her behalf, and that he was the robber who proposed to carry son, who, when violence was oliered to her by one of the robber, interfered in her behalf, and that he was the robber who proposed to carry their bad and elethes into the ceilar to prevent them from taking cold. The most important gridate, affecting Banks was that of Mrs. Barnett, the wills of the convict who is now in Newgate. She stated that her husband bought some of the stolen property, and that Banks made her a present of a brooch, which he said was part of the booty. She produced the brooch, which she had worn ever since.

Mr. Werrington, on seeing the brooch, declared that it was his property, and was stolen on the night of the robbsry from his dressing-table. He had been constantly in the habit of waaring it, and could not be mistaken as to its identify.

It is a curious fact, that when Bishop took Banks into custody, he found upon his back the identical green cost which was stolen by the gang from the house of J. Campion, Esq. at Wiltham Cross, in May last.

identical green coat which was stolen by the gang from the house of J. Campion, Esq. at Witham Cross, in May last.

Mr. Campion identified it as his property, and he brought forward the tailor who made it for him, who deposed that it was the coat he made for Mr. Campion; and that new buttons had been put upon it.

The prisoners are to be re-examined this flay at How-street office, when witnesses who saw several of the gang smoking cigars at a public house near to Mr. Warrington's the day before the robbery, will be called. The servant girl of Mr. Warrington has been sent for, and she will, in all probability, arrive in time for the examination. As there is no longer any necessity for secreey on the subject, it is believed that Sir Richard Birnie will take the investigation in public. The four robbers are in separate prisons. It is but justice to Bishop and the other officers to say, that their exertions for the last fortnight, by day and by night, have been unceasing, and they deserve great praise for what they have accomplished.

A KING AND HIS WIG.

Dr. George Horns was a man of unaffected picty, cheerful temper, great learning, and, not-withstanding his propensity to jesting, dignified mamners. He was much beloved in Magdalen manners. He was much beloved in Magdalen College, of which he was President; the chief complaint against him being that he did not reside the whole of the time in overy year that the statues required. He resigned his headship on being promoted from the Deanery of Canterbury to the See of Norwich; the slleged reason was the increased which the second was the content to the second was the content to the second was the content to the second was the second was the content to the second was the content to the second was the content to the second was the second the incompatability of the daties, though other manifested the least ill hun manifested the least ill humour himself, and re-pressed it, but with gentleness, in others. Hav-ing engaged in a party at whist, merely because he was wanted to make up the number, and playing indifferently ill, as he forowarned ha partner would be the case, he replied to the angry question, "What reason could you possi-lely have, Mr. President, for playing that card!" pressed it, but with gentleness, in others. Having engaged in a party at whist, merely because he was wanted to make up the number, and playing indifferently ill, as he forewarned his partner would be the case, he replied to the angry question, "What reason could you possibly have, Mr. President, for playing that card!" "None upon earth, I assure you." On the morning, when news was received in C-lege of the death of one of the Fellows, a good companion, a bon rizand. Horne met with another Fellow, an especial friend of the defunct, and began to condole with him:—"We have less poor L.—" "Ah! Mr. President, I may well say I could have spared a better man." "Meaning me, I suppo-e!" said Horne, with an air that, by its pleasantry, put to flight the other's grief. I was talking with Heary James Pye, late Poet Laureat, when he has helden the rame of Mr. P., a Gentleman of Berkshire, and M. It appears that Bayntun is a person of highly respectable connections. He was well brought up, and at an early period of his life became master of a considerable fortune. He repaired to London, and active time he impaired his resources materially by indusping in various acts of extravagence. Only a few mostline elapsed ere he had squandered away 4000f. He quitted London, and estired to Box, in Somer-ectable. During his residence there, he met with a young lady to whom he became farrently attached. The passion which he consected for her has given a color to the subsequent circumstances of his life. After having resided in the country for a short time, he returned to the mottropolis. There, however, he found it impossible to remain at rest, separated as he was from the object of his affections. He quitted London, thereby incurring considerable sarrificer, for the purpose of requining his mistress. His friends exclaimed against such condust; savertheless, he parsisted in his determination. He found the lady disposed to favor his addresses, and indulged in the most cangoine anticipations of happiness. Those, however, were doomed to be disappointed: the lady's friends opposed the connection, and at her father's instance she sent Baynton a latter, requesting him to abandoned to be disappointed: the lady's friends opposed the connection, and at her father's instance she sent Baynton a latter, requesting him to abandoned to be disappointed: the lady's friends opposed the connection, and at her father's instance she sent Baynton a latter, requesting him to abandoned to be disappointed in the first dea pointed to be disappointed. He lady is friends apposed to he connection, and at her father's instance she sent Baynton a latter, requesting him to abandoned to be more than the first dea pointed to the laws of his country, and (as he supposed) cause h he had no sooner forwarded it than, providing binness with implements for the purpose, he proceeded to the hay-ricks in question, at two 'clock in the open day, and set them on fire.—Having done this, he went to a constable, told him the offence he had committed, and voluntarily surrendered himself. This occurred se recently as Tuesday sen'night. The constable took the prisoner into custedy, and brought him before a Magistrate, to whom he confessed what he had done in the most explicit manner,—admitting the motives which had actuated him in the course he had taken. The prisoner disclaimed any malicious feelings towards the owners of the property which he had set on fire, and protested that so far from being influenced by such inducements, he did not even know their names. He stand that he was 'tired of life,' and having bean grievously disappointed in his dearest

The Jury, without hesitation, found the prisoner—Guitty. Judgment of death was recorded, but the actual sentence was not pronounced.

PHILADELPHIA:

MONDAY EVENING, OCT. 10, 1820.

At seven on Saturday morning, the steam boat WILLIAM PENN left this city, to convey a large number of gentlemen to the CHESAPEARE and DELAWARE CANAL, to join the directors in colebrating the opening of that great work,.... The Directors, by whom the boat had been chartered, were accompanied by the Mayor and Councils of this city, the Washington Greys and the Philadelphia Greys, and many highly respectable individuals, including stran-gers of distinction. Two other steambasts existed in conveying the company. They arri when the directors and their guests, leaving the steamboats, proceeded in barges through the CANAL till they reached the waters of the CHESAPEAKE, between 2 and 3. The barges arrived at Delaware city, on their return, between 6 and 7, and the steamboats reached this city bout midnight. Salutes were fired from For Delaware, from the U. S. schooner Ranger, at St. George's lock, and by the Boston brig Sciet at the summit Level Bridge.

On board the William Penn, the company sat down, about 7 in the evening, to an abundant and elegant repast. Two accidents occurred du At St. George's Lock, on the return, one of the Washington Greys fell into the Canal. A member of the other corps sprang in to assist him; and both were in great dange until Colonel John Swift, with remarkable presence of mind, jumped to the shore, seized a board, with which he swam out, and gave of fectual aid to both.

Near Newcastle, on the passage up the river, the steamboat ran foul of a small schooner loop. The master of the latter, incautiously throwing his left hand over the side as the ver sels met, received so much injury that immedi ate amputation of the fingers was found necess ry. This was performed by a medical gentle nan on board the William Penn, who, with com nendable care, had taken with him a case o surgical instruments. The sum of about one indred and forty dollars was at once collected

Two addresses were delivered during the day; ne on the Canal by the Chairman of the Committee of arrangements, the other at the table, by Mr. Nicholas Biddle. It is needless to say hat the reception of both was most cordial.

The following is a complete list of the several regiments of the British army, distinguished as the King's household troops:—" The first regi-ment of Life Guards (Cuirassiers,) Colonel the Earl of Harrington, G. C. V., consisting of eight troops, 400 men stationed at the Regent's Park Barracks, under the command of Lieut. Col. the Hon. H. B. Lygon, M. P. The second regiment of Life Guards (Cuirassiers,) Colonel Earl Knightsbridge Barrasks, under the command of Lieut.-Colonel the Hon. E. P. Lygon. The regiment of Royal Horse Guards (Blue,) Colone his Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland eight troops 320 men, stationed at Windsor under the command of Lieut.-Colonel Clemen Hill. The first regiment of Grenadier Guards Colonel his Grace the Duke of Wellington, cossisting of three battalions; the first battalion of 10 companies, 800 men, stationed at Portmanstreet Barracks under the command of Colone J. Hanbury-the 2d battalion of eight companies, 640 men, stationed at Knightsbridge Bar-racks under the command of Col. J. G. Woodford—the 2d battalian of eight companies, 649 men, stationed at Windster under the commen of Colonel Lord Saltoun. The Coldstream Guards, Colonel his Royal Highness, the Duke of Cambridge, consisting of two battalions; the let battalion of eight companies 640 men, stationed in Dublin, under the command of Lieut. Colonel J. Macdonnel-the 2d battalian of eight companies 460 men, are distributed in quarters at Westminster. The third regiment of Foot Guards, Colonel His Royal Highness the Duka of Gloucester, consisting of two battalions; the 1st battalion of eight companies, 640 men, stationed at the Tower, under the command of Colonel W. A. Kaste; the 2d battalion of eight companies of 640 men, stationed at the King's Maws Barracks, under the command of Color C. Bowater; the whole forming a fine effective force of 304 officers, and 5,760 privates."

Next to the Kimo and the Duke of WEL-LINGTON, the Prince LEOPOLD of SAXE Conung is the favourite subject for the gessiping paragraphists of the Lonnon papers. His Highness's pension, and his desire to make the most of it, are frequently alluded to; but not usually as gently as here:—"The recent depar-_...The recent departure of an illustrious annuitant has given occasion for an infinite deal of gemip among the few loangers who yet frequent the Saloons of the west. The plea of bad health being abandoned as unionable, three other causes are assigned for the Princely emigration—the first, that it is his flighteen's intention to renew his homego in a certain Imperial quarter, where, if report speaks true, it has already been re-jected, but the field is supposed to be now more open by the demine of a redoubted Chamber-lain, the into unseulus inter cares of an Italian establishment; the second, that it is proliminary fascinating German vocalist; the third, that it proceeds from metives of economy; as the original Res angusta Domi is supposed to warrant a reduction of expenditure during a Continental sojourn, which would not be looked upon with favourable eye in this country."

A most impudent theft was committed early on last Friday morning, at the house No. 34 Pewell street, the residence of Mr. Emanuel Coin, steward of the Swan steamboat. Mr. Coin is obliged, by his business, to sleep at Treaon while the boats are running. A rogue, acquainted with this circumstance, and having, probably, some knowledge of Mr. Coin's dor ic arrangements, slipped unperceived into the hed in the chamber of the absent master. He rose early the next morning, and collected quantity of clothes belonging to Mr. Coin, which he tied in a bundle. He also opened a desk, from which he took twenty or thirty dollars, an elegant and valuable cut glass fruit-basket, and a book containing Mr. Coin's account with the Savings Bank. At this time -probably about five o'clock-he heard footsteps near, and took to his heels. He was met in the entry by one or two females of the family, one of whom, as he ran, snatched the bundle of clothes from under his arm. He escaped, however, with the rest of the plunder. The women followed him to the front door, and called for aid; but the watchman had retired from his beat, and no one else was up. There was no

The line of U. S. Mail coaches, owned by ou enterprising mail contractor, Mr. Joseph Res-side, left New York yesterday, at 3 o'clock, P. M., and arrived in Philadelphia this morning at I o'clock, which makes ten hours;-dedu one hour and thirty minutes for supping, chang-ing mails, horses, and coaches, it brings the ac-tual time of travelling to eight hours and thirty minutes, being nearly twelve miles per hour.— From the style this line is conducted, the contractor certainly deserves great credit; and patronage, from a liberal public, should always be freely bustowed where the candidate for public favor is so particularly deserving as in the pre-

THE STREN OF BOSTON.—In relation to the rescue of the survivors of the wrack of this vessel, Capt. R. Caswell, of schr. J. G. Adams, of Salesm, arrived at Marblehead from a mackeral cruise, states that on the 4th ult. seeing the colors of the Marin, Baker, of Wellifleet, at half mast, he bore down to her, and being informed that the wrack of a schooner which he saw, had four men lashed on it, said to Capt. "It is somewhat rough, but we must get the men from the wrack, and encouraged the men to cheer up as he would get them off, and made every attempt to do so, but from the roughness of the sea did not reach her. In the next Irial he thinks he should have taken them off had he not been anticipated by the boat from Capt. B's vessel. Captain B. must have misunderstood Capt. The calcuration of the annual Cattle Show at Brighton, is thus humorously described by the Editor of the Boston Courier:—The annual fair Editor of the Boston Courier:—The annual fair and show of monstrusties, comprising a mediar of great cattle, great ragetables, great crowds and great curiosity, took place yesterday at Brighton. It is unnecessary to atpathate upon the sonorous grunt and the meledious bray, the astraordinary altitude or the slock retundity of the poined-up quadrupeds, who were patiently design looked at, or the diwers and manifest qualifications of the biped lookers. It is sufficient to say for the information of these abroad, that the day was daightful; and for the information of the support of the control of the same and the same daightful; and for the information of the same daightful; that the day was delightful; and for the inf

AMERICAN NOBLEMAN IN SPAIN.—The Pawtucket Chronicle relates an amusing story of a ship master, out of Rhode Island, who insuffered the Pases, among the ship's papers, on sending them to the custom house at Cadiz. The Intendant was much puzzled with the document. At the same time he was convinced, from the big seal and the signature, that it was a paper of mysterious importance. With the aid of a learned prefessor of languages, who was called in, it was, at length, sagaciously determined that the document was the famerican Captain's patent of nobility, and that the powers, privileges, and title conferred by it, were equivalent to those of a Spanish Count.

Dr. Howe, in a letter from the lathmus of Co rinth, dated 10th July, observes that he considers Greece "entirely dependent on the will of the European cabinets for the form of her government, for the course of her policy, nay, for her very political existence." This unfavorable circumstance excepted, the appearance of the crops is highly promising. Cane is still doing well, and corn very abundant.—The weather continues fine.

Georgetown, S. C. Oct. 7.—We have experienced much pleasant weather lately, though subject to frequent change. One day it would be so cool as to induce us to anticipate the speedy return of our friends who have gone abroad in pursuit of health, pleasure, or business—the next so much the reverse, as to defer the pleasing hope of yesterday. It has not yet been cold enough for frost; the last three days have been moderately cool—and we trust that we shall not experience much more warm weather.

Policic Count.—Jabez Lane, a robust looking tar, apparently about three sheets in the wind, was yesterday aftersoon brought before Mr. Justice Simmone, on twe complaints for pilfering—charging him with having abstracted from twe different stores a pair of boots and a pair of shoos. The latter were found on his feet, and the former under his arm. In his defence, the prisoner declared that he only took the articles to examine them—"Never was called a thief yet, in his day—never took a cent from any man, and never would—was from Cape Cod, and had paid more than fifty dellars in this place, yes, more than a hundred—was drunk when he took the shoos, and was drunk now—had an old pair on his feet, which he would give them, and go barefoot." Montreal, Oct. 8.—The notorious Ouelette, who, a few days ago, obtained a pardon from His Excellency Sir James Kempt, for becoming King's evidence at the trial of the Cap Sante burglars, was arrested on Tuesday evening for a robbery on board the Saint Lawrence steamer, under circumstances of rather an extraordinary nature. This most exemplary and moral character introduced himself while on board to the acquaintance of an ignorant rafts-man, whose pockets were well lined, probably from the high prices now obtained for lumber at Quebec. To this unsuspecting individual he displayed with pride His Majesty's most gracious pardon, and vaunted it forth as a pension for the valuable services which he had rendered to His Majesty's navy. So elated was the rafts-man with his new friend, that it required but little persuasion from Ouelette to make them partake of a common bed. On arriving at Montreal, Ouelette soon disembarked, and shortly after the rafts-man missed his mosey. On making inquiries to some of the watchen of this place as to whether Ouelette had been seen passing, the rafts-man was conducted by the guardinns of the night to the quarters which Ouelette had fixed upon for the ovening, and in a few minutes the culprit was brought forth from under a pile of beards, where he had concealed himself, and safely deposited in the watch house to await the judgment of the law. The money, we understand, has not yet been found.
